DR. HOLMES, OVERWORK VICTIM, GAVE UP HIS LIFE TO SAVE MINERS

Director of Bureau of Mines Rewarded by Decreasing Death Rate Among Nation's Workers.

Funeral services for Dr. Joseph Austin Holmes, director of the Bureau of Mines, who died vesterday of tuber culosis at his home in Denver, Colo. probably will be held in Laurens, 8 the city of his birth. Dr. Holmes who was widely known as a geologist, had been in poor health for many months, due to overwork. He went to Denver four months ago, with the hope of regaining health

Dr. Holmes was fifty-five years old, having been born November 23, 1853. He was graduated from Cornell University in 1880. During and since his college course he had devoted special attention to studies in chemistry, explosives, metallurgy, geology, elec-tricity, general physics, surveying, and mining. He visited mines and exam-ined iron, copper, coal, and other min-erals in many parts of the United States and in Germany, France, Belgium, and Great Britain.

With a view of lessening the loss of with a view of resources, he studied in foreign countries as well as in the United States. From 1881 to 1891 he was professor of geology in the University of North Carolina, and was State geologist from 1891 to 1903.
